Somerville man attacks Army vet

BOSTON. A Somerville man pleaded not guilty yesterday to beating a wounded Army veteran who told him to stop urinating in public.

James Plunkett, 26, and a second man were allegedly urinating near Charles and Pinckney streets about 1:30 a.m. Monday when the 29-year-old veteran and his wife walked by. The veteran was wounded in Iraq, authorities said. When the veteran told Plunkett and the other man to "put it away," the men followed the couple to their car and beat him, authorities said. The veteran suffered broken bones in his face and hand. The second man has been identified and may be charged in the future. METRO

U.S. Attorney for Massachusetts Carmen Oritz said last night that authorities are investigating the New England Compounding Center and agents were at the facility yesterday.

The compounding center is linked to the national outbreak of fungal meningitis that has claimed 15 lives and left hundreds sick. METRO

Report: Sex encounter led to death of missing UNH student

WESTBOROUGH. A University of New Hampshire student from Westborough was killed during a sexual encounter, according to a newspaper report. Elizabeth Marriott, 19, was allegedly killed during the encounter with 29-year-old Seth Mazzaglia at a Dover, N.H., apartment, according to the Foster's Daily Democrat.

It was not clear if the encounter was voluntary or involuntary. Mazzaglia has been charged with second-degree murder. Authorities have said Marriott was suffocated or strangled. Her body has not yet been found. METRO

UMass heads discuss growing enrollment, system's future

Chancellors of various University of Massachusetts campuses said their short-term goals include updating aging infrastructure while boosting the reputations of their respective institutions.

The goals were laid out during a special UMass board of trustees meeting yesterday held at The UMass Club on the 33rd floor of a Financial District building.

UMass Boston Chancellor J. Keith Motley said he is expecting to grow student enrollment at the school to 20,000 by 2020. Currently there are about 16,000 students at the Hub campus.

Motley also said a forthcoming additional 2,000 beds for on-campus housing will help promote the image of a "24/7 UMass Boston."

"We are in Boston ... our place is changing," Motley said. "It's a wonderful place to be at this point in time."

UMass Amherst Chancellor Kumble Subbaswamy also said he is pushing to change the perception of the system's flagship campus from a back-up school to a top choice. METRO/MN

City's new bicycle safety ads go too far for some riders

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

▶ A bicyclist passes one of the controversial ads yesterday.

A safety campaign launched last week by the Boston Public Health Commission has turned a few stomachs across the Hub lately, and while critics said scare tactics are at play, officials contend that the end justifies the means.

The commission recently planted about two dozen posters at Boston bus stations and other public spaces that show the bloodied faces of riders who, apparently, did not wear their helmets. One photograph shows a man wiping blood from his scraped face, and comes with the caption: "Still think it's the helmet that's unattractive? There are no good excuses."

Another shows a man with open, bloody gashes on his face, with a caption: "And you think a helmet is uncomfortable?" A third poster is more mild, and shows a woman wearing a banged up helmet with minor scratches on her face, and has the caption: "Not thinking about helmet hair now, are you?"

Bostonbiker.org, a local bicyclist blog, slammed the ad campaign for what it considered to be violent imagery.

"That is some seriously heavy imagery, not the least of which because (it is) a young black man with a bloody face posted in (an) area of town heavily trafficked by young black people. This is some seriously violent imagery for a public safety campaign," wrote the blog's author.

Randy Harrison, a marketing consultant and part-time faculty member in the marketing department at Emerson College, agreed that the ad campaign misses its mark.

"I think when people see things like that they turn away. If they want to frighten people because they think fear will motivate people to alter their behavior, I think that is misguided," Harrison said.

A better way to get cyclists on board with the helmet push, he said, would be to use a metaphor, similar to the iconic "This is your brain on drugs" fried egg commercial launched in 1987.

"That was a metaphor that created a real conversation," Harrison said.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU
morgan.rousseau@metro.us

Cringe-worthy advertisements

- A $54 million campaign called "Tips From Former Smokers" was launched by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in March, and shows sick, dying or disabled people talking - often in raspy voices - about their experiences with cigarettes.
- Released in Europe in 2009, a four-minute commercial shows teenage girls being banged up and killed in a car accident while texting and driving.
- PETA is on the blunt ad bandwagon, often showing graphic images of animals being hurt or killed to raise awareness about animal cruelty like "Canada's Shame" that shows sealers beating bloody baby seals.

Boston Public Health responds

In response to the criticism that has been voiced by some people over the new bicycle safety campaign, city health leaders said they have worked with multiple partners for years to make biking in Boston safer.

That effort, said Dr. Huy Nguyen, a Boston Public Health Commission medical director and pediatrician, is a "comprehensive approach" that includes connected bike lanes and distributing free and low-cost helmets.

And now it includes a poster campaign.

"We have made progress in building infrastructure to make riding safer than ever in Boston, but helmet use, particularly in some neighborhoods, remains low. Getting all riders to wear helmets is the next step in insuring that residents can enjoy the health rewards of biking. This helmet campaign is about getting residents to think and talk more about cycling safety. After all, bike riding is not dangerous — falling off a bike without a helmet is dangerous," Nguyen said in a statement.

The star of a new iOS app that was slated to launch today for iPads may look like he has a case of the blues, but his local creators said he will give plenty of players a reason to smile.

"Negative Nimbus," created by Boston media company CloudKid, is a touch-based game that lets players earn points by helping the sad rain cloud known as Nimbus rain on flowers while keeping characters, like laptops, phones, apples and hot dogs, dry.

"He is the Eeyore of the skies," said Mike Annear, CloudKid's animation director. "We really wanted to hit that little sweet spot of humor that is on everyone's level."

Nimbus recently nabbed CloudKid the Visual Art Award at the Boston Indie Games Festival.

The Emmy-nominated company co-produced PBS's "Fizzy's Lunch Lab," and produced its first game with "Sesame Street."

"Now it's time for us to flex our own muscles and show the world what we can do on our own," said Dave Schlafman, CloudKid's co-founder and a Massachusetts College of Art 2001 graduate. "We wanted to create a character that was so memorable that we could do more than just an app."

The app will be available for iPhones next month.

Cloudy with a chance of chuckles

Negative Nimbus' melancholy personality is balanced by Bill the Umbrella, his upbeat friend who helps shield characters from Nimbus' rain showers.

The creators describe Nimbus as "thoughtful, calculating, insightful, introspective."

Bill the Umbrella, on the other hand, is "wild, adventurous, with an extreme case of A.D.D."

Cops: Man stashes heroin in baby diaper

BOSTON. State police said that they pulled over a Boston man and found that he allegedly stashed 100 grams of heroin in a diaper that was in a baby bag.

Yefri Guerrero-Ramirez, 25, was charged with trafficking heroin and having an obstructed nontransparent window.

A trooper stopped Guerrero-Ramirez traveling on Route 84 in Sturbridge on Sunday because his car windows were excessively tinted, police said.

The trooper decided that Guerrero-Ramirez "was not being truthful" and called for a drug-sniffing police dog that detected an odor of drugs.

Troopers found a baby bag that contained a drug-filled diaper as well as a digital scale, police said.

Police did not say if there was a baby in the car.

Citi's CEO Pandit exits abruptly after board clash

Citigroup's Vikram Pandit quit as chief executive yesterday after months of simmering tensions with the board — an abrupt change that surprised investors and employees of the third-largest U.S. bank.

Pandit told Reuters the decision to leave was his own, and that he had been contemplating the move for some time.

Multiple sources within and outside the bank said Pandit's departure followed months of tension with Chairman Michael O'Neill over a range of issues, including compensation and the role of Chief Operating Officer John Havens. On Tuesday, Havens also resigned.

Pandit has been involved in some high-profile snafus this year, including the bank selling the remaining stake of its retail brokerage business to Morgan Stanley at a loss.

High profile defeats

Pandit's resignation followed a series of high-profile mishaps this year. In March, the Federal Reserve rejected the bank's plans to return capital to shareholders; Pandit had told analysts and investors the bank had enough capital to return some to shareholders.

Last month, Pandit agreed to a low sale price for his bank's stake in the brokerage operated by Morgan Stanley. Citigroup had to take a $4.7 billion charge in the third quarter to write down the value of that stake. REUTERS

Senior executives were mostly stunned by Pandit's departure. It is not clear precisely what led Pandit to quit, but the decision to swiftly name Corbat as CEO is a clear sign that O'Neill is now fully in control of the bank, according to one person familiar with Citigroup.

A Citigroup spokeswoman declined to comment on accounts of friction with the board. REUTERS

Not on board

The board's relationship with Pandit was already under pressure after shareholders rejected the CEO's pay package in an advisory vote in April. He was awarded more than $15 million in 2011 compensation, but 55 percent of shareholders voted against it.

Dutch art heist nets works by Monet, Picasso, Matisse

Thieves made off with paintings by Picasso, Matisse, Monet and other prominent modern artists from Rotterdam's Kunsthal museum early yesterday in a brazen and meticulously planned operation.

The seven stolen works, which also include a Gauguin, a Lucian Freud and a Meyer de Haan, are thought to be worth tens of millions of dollars.

Dutch police investigating the overnight heist have yet to put a price on the paintings, and few details have emerged about how they were removed from the museum designed by Rem Koolhaas.

But the theft is one of the art world's most dramatic in recent years.

Roland Ekkers, a spokesman for Rotterdam police, said they received a call alerting them to the theft at around 9 p.m. local time.

Kunsthal was supposed to be state of the art," Ekkers said.

"But somehow the people responsible for this found a way in and a way out and they found time to take seven paintings. So that's something that is part of our investigation right now."

The works stolen were Picasso's "Tête d'Arlequin," Matisse's "La Liseuse en Blanc et Jaune," Monet's "Waterloo Bridge, London" and "Charing Cross Bridge, London," Gauguin's "Femme devant une fenêtre ouverte," De Haan's "Autoportrait" and Freud's "Woman with Eyes Closed."

- Experts said it would be next to impossible for the thieves to sell such well-known works on the open market, increasing the chances of their recovery in a relatively short period of time.
- "They are going to learn very quickly that these things cannot be sold," said Christopher Marinello, executive director of The Art Loss Register, which helps track down stolen works of art.
- "They don't even think about it sometimes. They may try and call and entice a ransom," he told Reuters.
- He added, however, that it was unlikely the works had been stolen "to order" from a wealthy collector.

SWEAT. SCORE. AS YOU GET OLDER, REALLY GREAT. BUT DON'T FORGET TO VACCINATE.

ZOSTAVAX® (Zoster Vaccine Live) is available at certain pharmacies and medical practices.
Talk to your health care professional or visit findZOSTAVAX.com for more information.

Now's the time to help prevent Shingles with ZOSTAVAX.

ZOSTAVAX is a vaccine that helps prevent Shingles in adults 50 years of age or older. Shingles is caused by the same virus that causes chickenpox. The virus stays in your body and can resurface at any time as Shingles—a painful, blistering rash. And no matter how healthy you feel, your risk increases as you get older.

The sooner you get vaccinated with ZOSTAVAX, the better your chances of protecting yourself from Shingles. In fact, the ACIP* of the CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention) recommends that appropriate adults 60 years of age and older get vaccinated to help prevent Shingles.

Talk to your health care professional to see if ZOSTAVAX is right for you.

ZOSTAVAX is given as a single shot. ZOSTAVAX cannot be used to treat Shingles, or the nerve pain that may follow Shingles, once you have it. For more information, visit ZOSTAVAX.com or call 1-877-9 SHINGLES.

You are encouraged to report negative side effects of prescription drugs to the FDA. Visit www.fda.gov/medwatch or call 1-800-FDA-1088.

ABOUT ZOSTAVAX

ZOSTAVAX is a vaccine that is used for adults 50 years of age or older to prevent Shingles (also known as zoster).

Important Safety Information

- ZOSTAVAX does not protect everyone, so some people who get the vaccine may still get Shingles.
- You should not get ZOSTAVAX if you are allergic to any of its ingredients, including gelatin or neomycin, have a weakened immune system, take high doses of steroids, or are pregnant or plan to become pregnant. You should not get ZOSTAVAX to prevent chickenpox.
- Talk to your health care professional if you plan to get ZOSTAVAX at the same time as PNEUMOVAX®23 (Pneumococcal Vaccine Polyvalent) because it may be better to get these vaccines at least 4 weeks apart.
- Possible side effects include redness, pain, itching, swelling, hard lump, warmth, or bruising at the injection site, as well as headache.
- ZOSTAVAX contains a weakened chickenpox virus. Tell your health care professional if you will be in close contact with newborn infants, someone who may be pregnant and has not had chickenpox or been vaccinated against chickenpox, or someone who has problems with their immune system. Your health care professional can tell you what situations you may need to avoid.

Before you get Shingles, get vaccinated.

ZOSTAVAX®
Zoster Vaccine Live

ADVERTISEMENT

Patient Information about ZOSTAVAX® (pronounced "ZOS tah vax") Generic name: Zoster Vaccine Live 9989115

You should read this summary of information about ZOSTAVAX before you are vaccinated. If you have any questions about ZOSTAVAX after reading this page, you should ask your health care provider. This information does not take the place of talking about ZOSTAVAX with your doctor, nurse, or other health care provider. Only your health care provider can decide if ZOSTAVAX is right for you.

What is ZOSTAVAX and how does it work?
ZOSTAVAX is a vaccine that is used for adults 50 years of age or older to prevent shingles (also known as zoster).

ZOSTAVAX contains a weakened chickenpox virus (varicella-zoster virus).

ZOSTAVAX works by helping your immune system protect you from getting shingles.

If you do get shingles even though you have been vaccinated, ZOSTAVAX may help prevent the nerve pain that can follow shingles in some people. ZOSTAVAX does not protect everyone, so some people who get the vaccine may still get shingles.

ZOSTAVAX cannot be used to treat shingles, or the nerve pain that may follow shingles, once you have it.

What do I need to know about shingles and the virus that causes it?
Shingles is caused by the same virus that causes chickenpox. Once you have had chickenpox, the virus can stay in your nervous system for many years. For reasons that are not fully understood, the virus may become active again and give you shingles. Age and problems with the immune system may increase your chances of getting shingles.

Shingles is a rash that is usually on one side of the body. The rash begins as a cluster of small red spots that often blister. The rash can be painful. Shingles rashes usually last up to 30 days and, for most people, the pain associated with the rash lessens as it heals.

Who should not get ZOSTAVAX?
You should not get ZOSTAVAX if you:
- are allergic to any of its ingredients.
- are allergic to gelatin or neomycin.
- have a weakened immune system (for example, an immune deficiency, leukemia, lymphoma, or HIV/AIDS).
- take high doses of steroids by injection or by mouth.
- are pregnant or plan to get pregnant.

You should not get ZOSTAVAX to prevent chickenpox.

Children should not get ZOSTAVAX.

How is ZOSTAVAX given?
ZOSTAVAX is given as a single dose by injection under the skin.

What should I tell my health care provider before I get ZOSTAVAX?
You should tell your health care provider if you:
- have or have had any medical problems.
- take any medicines, including non-prescription medicines, and dietary supplements.
- have any allergies, including allergies to neomycin or gelatin.
- had an allergic reaction to another vaccine.
- are pregnant or plan to become pregnant.
- are breast-feeding.

Tell your health care provider if you expect to be in close contact (including household contact) with newborn infants, someone who may be pregnant and has not had chickenpox or been vaccinated against chickenpox, or someone who has problems with their immune system. Your health care provider can tell you what situations you may need to avoid.

Can I get ZOSTAVAX with other vaccines?
Talk to your health care provider if you plan to get ZOSTAVAX at the same time as the flu vaccine.

Talk to your health care provider if you plan to get ZOSTAVAX at the same time as PNEUMOVAX®23 (Pneumococcal Vaccine Polyvalent) because it may be better to get these vaccines at least 4 weeks apart.

What are the possible side effects of ZOSTAVAX?
The most common side effects that people in the clinical studies reported after receiving the vaccine include:
- redness, pain, itching, swelling, hard lump, warmth, or bruising where the shot was given.
- headache

The following additional side effects have been reported with ZOSTAVAX:
- allergic reactions, which may be serious and may include difficulty in breathing or swallowing. If you have an allergic reaction, call your doctor right away.
- chickenpox
- fever
- hives at the injection site
- joint pain
- muscle pain
- nausea
- rash
- rash at the injection site
- swollen glands near the injection site (that may last a few days to a few weeks)

Tell your health care provider if you have any new or unusual symptoms after you receive ZOSTAVAX. For a complete list of side effects, ask your health care provider.

Call 1-800-986-8999 to report any exposure to ZOSTAVAX during pregnancy.

What are the ingredients of ZOSTAVAX?
Active Ingredient: a weakened form of the varicella-zoster virus.

Inactive Ingredients: sucrose, hydrolyzed porcine gelatin, sodium chloride, monosodium L-glutamate, sodium phosphate dibasic, potassium phosphate monobasic, potassium chloride.

This page summarizes important information about ZOSTAVAX. If you would like more information, talk to your health care provider or visit the website at www.ZOSTAVAX.com or call 1-800-622-4477.

‘I take responsibility’ for Benghazi, Clinton says

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Clinton

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton assumed responsibility Monday for last month’s deadly attack on the U.S. diplomatic mission in Benghazi, Libya, which has become an issue in the hard-fought U.S. presidential campaign.

“I take responsibility” for what happened on Sept. 11, Clinton said in an interview with CNN during a visit to Peru, adding that President Barack Obama and Vice President Joe Biden would not be responsible for specific security instructions for U.S. diplomatic facilities.

“I’m in charge of the State Department’s 60,000-plus people all over the world,” Clinton said.

Clinton’s comments followed stepped-up criticism of the Obama administration over the Benghazi attack, which Republican presidential challenger Mitt Romney has sought to use to dent Obama’s foreign policy credibility before the Nov. 6 election.

“The president and the vice president wouldn’t be knowledgeable about specific decisions that are made by security professionals. They’re the ones who weigh all of the threats and the risks and the needs and make a considered decision.”

Pro-marijuana advocates try out new court strategy

WASHINGTON. Supporters of marijuana rights asked a federal appeals court yesterday to do what Congress and U.S. presidents have resisted for decades and help ease the level of regulation surrounding the popular recreational drug.

Oakland, Calif.-based Americans for Safe Access said there was no reason for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) to control marijuana as tightly as it does heroin.

The argument is a new tactic for marijuana supporters who have already won local approval for medical use in 16 states and Washington, D.C. REUTERS

Microsoft prices Wi-Fi Surface tablet below new Apple iPad

SEATTLE. Microsoft Corp. is setting the price of its new Surface tablet below comparable versions of Apple’s iPad, signaling its intent to grab a slice of the booming tablet market.

The world’s largest software company, which announced its surprise foray into computer manufacturing in June, said it would sell a 32-gigabyte (GB), Wi-Fi-only version of its tablet at $499, versus $599 for a comparable version of Apple’s new iPad.

Microsoft’s tablet, which is taller and slightly heavier than an iPad, will go on sale Oct. 26. REUTERS

Romney finds staunch support in rural areas

Rural voters have been a Republican bastion for at least a generation, with Democrats trying to at least be competitive so small-town voters don't offset their advantage in cities.

A new poll suggests they may not be competitive enough, Bloomberg reports in its Political Capital blog.

Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney has opened up a 22-point advantage among rural voters in swing states, according to a poll released today by the National Rural Assembly, a group of largely left-leaning, prairie populist groups. The poll, funded by the Carnegie Corporation of New York, holds bipartisan credentials.

And it's not good news for President Barack Obama. BLOOMBERG

"It's fair to say his lead among these rural voters is what's helping him in swing states overall."

▶ Obama and Romney speak during the second presidential debate at Hofstra University.

President Barack Obama and Republican rival Mitt Romney clashed repeatedly on jobs, energy and Libya in their second debate on Tuesday, with Obama moving aggressively to challenge his opponent.

Obama was much sharper and more energetic than in their first encounter two weeks ago. The Democrat fought back against accusations by his rival that he had played down the attack by Islamist militants in Libya last month that killed four Americans, including the U.S. Ambassador Chris Stevens.

"I'm the president and I'm always responsible," Obama said. The two men argued over whether Obama had described the Libya attack as terrorism.

Romney accused his opponent of overseeing a stagnant economy. "The middle class has been crushed over the last four years and jobs have been too scarce," the former Massachusetts governor said.

"I want to make small businesses grow ... I spent my life in the private sector. I know why jobs come and ... go."

Quoted: Obama

"And [promises] that I haven't been able to keep, it's not for a lack of trying and we're going to get it done in the second term."

"I know what it takes to get this economy going," he said. "I know what it takes to create good jobs again."

Obama repeatedly accused Romney of misstating his policies as president, and resurrected his charge that the economic proposals put forward by the former private equity executive were designed to protect and bolster the wealthy at the expense of the middle class.

The debate at Hofstra University in Hempstead, N.Y., was in an intimate town-hall format, in which some of more than 80 undecided local voters f asked questions.

Both candidates were able to roam the stage to talk directly to the questioners, and at times they circled each other warily like prize fighters.

Romney approached Obama at one point to ask repeatedly if he had reduced licenses and permits for energy drilling on federal land. REUTERS

Ohio early voting

Small victory for Dems in Ohio

The U.S. Supreme Court gave President Barack Obama's campaign a legal victory in the pivotal state of Ohio today, backing early-voting rights for the weekend before the Nov. 6 election.

The justices rejected a bid by Ohio Republicans to limit the early voting on those days to members of the military. The rebuff came in a one-line order, with no published dissent.

What's it about?

Democrats and Republicans have jockeyed for months in Ohio over early voting, an option that favored Democratic candidates in 2010 and 2006.

In previous years, each Ohio county decided whether to offer voting on the weekend before the election. The state's Republican leadership sought to make a statewide change for this year and allow voting that weekend only by military members, who historically favor Republican candidates.

What's at stake?

A trial judge cited an estimate that 100,000 Ohioans would vote in the three days leading up to Election Day. Ohio controls 18 of the 270 Electoral College votes needed to win the presidency. BLOOMBERG

Romney makes 'killer' haul

Republican presidential nominee Mitt Romney and allied party committees raised more than $170 million in September in a fundraising haul praised by real-estate mogul Donald Trump as "big numbers."

It was a "killer" month, said New York Jets owner Woody Johnson. Both men commented as they filed into a Romney gala last night in New York City intended to thank contributors and fundraisers. BLOOMBERG

The hard truth about fact-checking campaigns

Fact-checking presidential campaigns has become a kind of sport in recent years, complete with scorecards tallying the competition between ratings of true, false or somewhere in between.

What has been missing — and is likely to stay missing in Tuesday's presidential debate — is suspense. The winner in the ratings game is generally the same: somewhere in between. The terminology differs from fact-checker to fact-checker. But the reality is that the vast majority of claims fact-checkers put under scrutiny are deemed to be partly true or partly false but rarely completely one or the other.

ANDREW BURTON/GETTY IMAGES

▶ People gather around a display booth with the word 'TRUTH' printed on its side at Hofstra University.

▶ "There is most often some grain of truth ... but the candidates will twist it and distort it." BROOKS JACKSON, WHO RUNS FACTCHECK.ORG

The triumph of the neither wholly true nor wholly false partly reflects the complexity of the issues. But credit mostly goes to obfuscation by the campaigns.

Theirs is a world of apples-to-oranges comparisons and cherry-picked time frames, enveloped by a fog of competing studies. As fact-checkers have noted, for example, the increase in the federal budget deficit cited by the campaigns depends entirely on the starting point for the calculation.

It's bad for President Barack Obama if the starting point for the calculation is fiscal 2008, which ended before Obama took office and is the reference point for the campaign of Republican candidate Mitt Romney. But it's not quite as bad if the starting point is January 2009, when he actually assumed office. REUTERS

EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW: LOUISE MUSHIKIWABO
RWANDAN FOREIGN MINISTER

Introduction

THE GOVERNMENT OF RWANDA has confirmed to Metro that it may pursue legal action against a United Nations-appointed Group of Experts that has accused the small central African nation of stoking a military rebellion in the neighboring Democratic Republic of Congo.

Rwandan Foreign Minister Louise Mushikiwabo said in an exclusive interview yesterday that the expert panel has been "hijacked" by the political agenda of its coordinator, Steven Hege, who Rwanda says has a long history of opposition to the nation's government.

"We will not take this kind of treatment lying down," Mushikiwabo told Metro.

Interview

You have vigorously criticized not only the U.N. reports compiled by the Group of Experts accusing Rwanda of supporting the M-23 rebel militia in the Democratic Republic of Congo, but also the methodology employed in these reports — and, above all, "bias" on the part of the group's coordinator.

We have endeavored to be objective in our assessment of Mr. Hege. To this end, we employed the Washington, D.C., law firm Akin Gump to review Mr. Hege's prior writings on Rwanda as well as the genocidal army and militia which killed more than 1 million people in a veritable Holocaust over three summer months in 1994. The fact-based evidence, which was vetted by Akin Gump and submitted to the Security Council, in the case of Hege, is damning in the extreme and should have disqualified him from taking the position as coordinator of the Group of Experts in the first place.

What has Hege written prior to taking up his position as coordinator?

First and foremost, Hege has served as an out-and-out apologist for the remnants of the very genocidal forces who, after committing their genocidal crimes, became known as the FDLR after taking refuge into the eastern DRC when they were chased out of Rwanda in 1994. Hege characterizes the FDLR militia, whose leaders are either under indictment at the International Criminal Court at the Hague or on trial in Germany, as if its members are somehow victims, and not perpetrators, of mass atrocities. In this "fact sheet" written in 2009 and entitled "Understanding the FDLR," Hege also described, falsely, the current Rwandan government as made up of illegitimate outsiders, a "Ugandan Tutsi elite," and that peace in our region is only possible "when international opinion eventually sours on the Rwandan regime." With this objective in mind, Hege's hatchet job, on the platform which the UN report has accorded him, becomes frighteningly clear. The reports which he and the Group of Experts have submitted to the UN Sanctions Committee wouldn't pass muster in the lowest imaginable court of law. As Akin Gump concluded, "The lack of transparency, the reliance on questionable sources and the complete lack of analysis of witness bias, motivation or contradictory evidence in the conclusions reached [make] those conclusions highly unreliable."

Quoted

"The U.N. process for the appointment and vetting of 'experts' is broken and in desperate needs of repair."
MINISTER MISHIKIWABO

Are you saying Mr. Hege isn't entitled to his point of view?

Of course, Mr. Hege is entitled to his views as a private citizen. But his extremist views are now well known in Africa because of the platform he has been given by the United Nations. Referencing Hege's call, in a 2010 issues paper, for ethnic minority groups to preference their economic and other interests in favor of the majority population, regardless of circumstance; according to perhaps the leading newspaper in East Africa, Hege's writing that certain ethnic groups "must clear a higher bar of citizenship is central to racial ideology everywhere, whether in the form of anti-Semitism of the persecution of Japanese Americans in World War II."

Hege knows that he is exposed on the matter of his prior writings. When this publication was discovered by the media in July, Hege pulled it from the Internet.

I want to put the entire matter with Hege into its proper perspective. Yes, the methodology employed by the Group of Experts is wholly flawed. But, above all, what we have here is the moral disgrace committed in the name of the U.N. A sympathizer or, more accurately, apologist of genocide perpetrators has been put in a position to sit in judgment of the victims, the Rwandan people.

Are you suggesting a bigger U.N. problem here?

Yes, I am. It is clear that the U.N. process for the appointment and vetting of "experts" is broken and in desperate need of repair. The failed expert selection on Congo, which has somehow turned into an indictment of Rwanda, is but one of a number of recent miscarriages of justice of the same kind hurting African countries, including expert panels on Cote d'Ivoire and Somalia-Eritrea. The time has now come for the international community to know about the treatment being meted out to powerless countries like Rwanda through unjust, outdated and punitive international mechanisms such as the U.N. Group of Experts when it falls into the hands of individuals with a personal political agenda.

Q&A

What is the status of the conflict in the eastern Congo?

Eleven countries of the region, including Rwanda and the DRC, are joining forces to bring about a lasting solution to the crisis. This includes deploying a neutral force to monitor the borders between the eastern DRC and its neighbors. It also includes a "joint verification mechanism," which is a way to test the truth or otherwise the many claims and counter-claims that circulate during periods of instability. The regional peace process has led to a two-month cease-fire, and there is overwhelming consensus that the only way out of the mess is a political solution, not a military one. It is a complex part of the world. There are dozens of armed groups running riot, and the state of governance is weak. The problems didn't emerge overnight and can't be fixed overnight, but there is a strong belief that a regional solution is not only the best way forward – it is the only way forward.

Official statement

Metro contacted the U.N. for comment. The organization's official statement is: Until all of Steve Hege's findings on Rwanda are final and published, the U.N. has no comment on the matter.

Depp planning to launch eccentric, yet dashing, book imprint

ALL PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

Celebrities are constantly launching perfumes and clothing lines. But Johnny Depp is not just any old actor. He's Johnny Depp! He's gotta do things differently! So what is the famed actor's new vanity project? Why, he's going to publish books!

According to a statement by Harper Collins, Depp is launching an imprint with the book publisher called Infinitum Nihil (translation: "nothing last forever"). Per the statement, Depp says, "I pledge, on behalf of Infinitum Nihil, that we will do our best to deliver publications worthy of people's time, of people's concern — publications that might ordinarily never have breached the parapet."

The imprint has already announced one book: "The Untraveled Tales of Bob Dylan" by the historian Douglas Brinkley, which is set for publication in 2015.

Interesting way to inject some glamour into the rather staid world of book publishing. And, hey, unlike the rest of us involved in the media world, it's not like he has to worry about the scant paycheck. But does anyone else get the mental image of Depp editing books while dressed like a pirate and using a quill pen?

▶ You know it's only a matter of time before Depp works with Tim Burton on a new book.

Talking points

ScarJo is single again

Scarlett Johansson has split up with boyfriend Nate Naylor just weeks after she was spotted looking cozy with ex Jared Leto at a political event, according to Daily Mail. How official is the split? Naylor was even spotted clearing his belongings out of Johansson's New York home. "They never officially lived together, but Nate has moved all of his stuff out and back into his apartment," a source says.

▶ Greene

Ashley Greene is a frequent flier

Ashley Greene has found a downside to being successful: getting spoiled when it comes to travel. "'Twilight' has ruined me," Greene tells Marie Clare magazine. "When ['Twilight'] is all over, flying internationally is going to be very hard for me. It is just not worth it to buy a first-class ticket, because of the cost." Worth it or not, Greene should have no trouble paying for it, though, as she's been smart. "I'm lucky because my dad taught me to be frugal and save," she says.

▶ Fey, Beyonce and Poehler: Unite!

Let's hear it for the girls

Next year is going to start out strong, at least TV-watching wise. Not only will Tina Fey and Amy Poehler co-host the 70th annual Golden Globes on Jan. 13, but Beyonce has been locked in to perform the half time show at Super Bowl XLVII on Feb. 3 in New Orleans. Now, if only the world could find a way for all three to perform together, then we could all just give up — nothing else would be that awesome again ever.

Tour the world with Google Street View

Unless you're planning to travel across the icy Southern Ocean or deep into the Brazilian rainforests for your next vacation, you probably won't see Antarctica or the Amazon anytime soon. The same goes for the world's less remote places. Many of us, depending on location and circumstances, may never see Australia, Asia or even common European tourist attractions.

Though it's not exactly the same as being there, we can visit these areas and other amazing sites across the globe with Google Maps. More than just checking out satellite imagery, we can actually survey the land (or the sea) with Street View as if we're on foot (or boat or rail, as the case may be).

Been a long time since 'ROCK and ROLL'

Led Zeppelin discuss new concert film Why putting Jason Bonham on drums was the best way to make sure the song remained the same

KEVIN MAZUR/GETTY IMAGES

"Celebration Day" was directed by Dick Carruthers, who had previously worked on videos for the White Stripes, Oasis and Take That. Visit www.ledzeppelin.com for cinema listings.

Only 18,000 people got to see a somewhat reunited Led Zeppelin in 2007 at a concert in honor of Ahmet Ertegun, the late founder of Atlantic Records who died in 2006. More than 20 million people applied for tickets to catch the one-off, two-hour show at London's O2 Arena, featuring Robert Plant, Jimmy Page and John Paul Jones, playing their first real concert since the mid-1980s (Jason Bonham, the son of Zeppelin's original drummer, John Bonham, was on drums).

Now the millions of fans who were left out can catch what happened in the new concert film "Celebration Day," in theaters today and available on DVD on Nov. 19.

At a recent press conference in New York City, the surviving Zep members were charming and funny, but they gave no indication that another reunion would take place any time soon. They did allow, however, that choosing Jason Bonham to join them was a no-brainer.

"Once the idea was proposed — 'Would we do the concert?' — it had to be Jason," Page said.

For Bonham, who has played with Zep twice before, the giddiness of joining them again at the O2 hasn't abated.

Quoted

"I had lots of moments where I kept saying 'I'm playing drums for Led Zeppelin!'"
JASON BONHAM

"This really is something special and something I dreamed about all my life. I watched 'Song Remains the Same' so many times that the look that Jimmy gave John in 'No Quarter,' I remember, I looked over ... He gave me the same look," says Bonham, before turning to Page. "It probably wasn't for the same reason you [looked at] Dad, but it was very, very special for me, honestly."

Page then joked, "That was the 'where are we?' look."

"Celebration Day" includes the band's monster hits such as "Stairway to Heaven," and "Dazed and Confused," as well as the unexpected, such as 1976's "For Your Life," which the band had never played live prior to the London show.

"Celebration Day" is just a straight-up concert film, meaning no talking heads, no backstage glances, no trippy "quest" montages like in "The Song Remains the Same." They appear shaky at first but then quickly get into their old rock 'n' roll habits. Per Page, "getting it right" was a priority.

"We just really wanted to get it right and go out and play to people who maybe never heard us, who had heard about this reputation and what we were about, and basically stand up and be counted for what we were," he said.

Yes, you should get a flu shot this year

The question: Do I really need to get a flu shot?

The doctor will see you now

DR. MARK MELROSE
WWW.URGENTCAREMANHATTAN.COM

40

Forty percent of adults have had a flu shot in the last year. Source: Walgreens

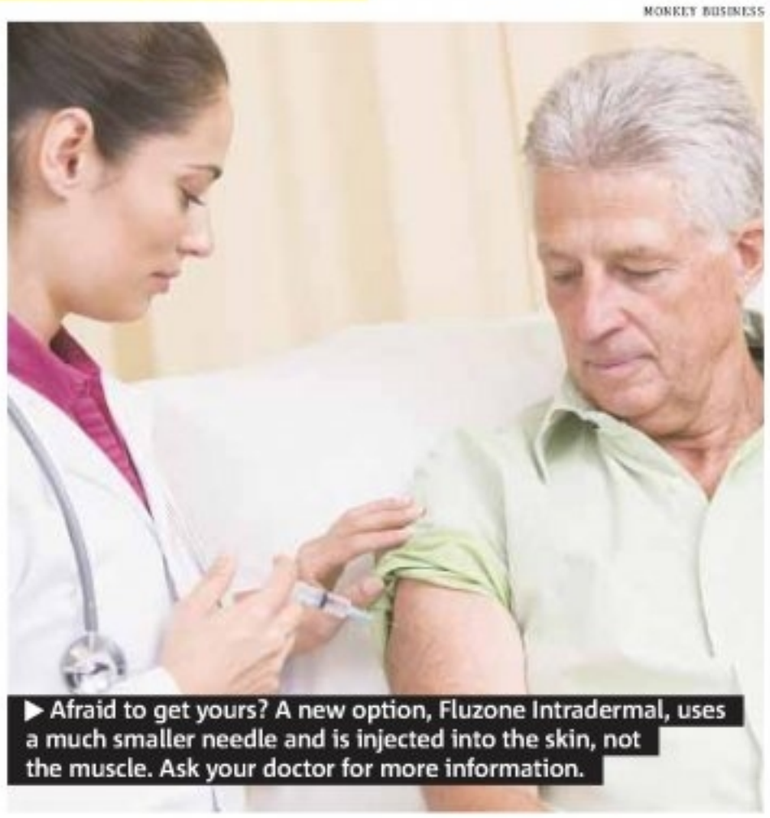
Benjamin Franklin once said, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

This is never truer than when it comes to flu shots and avoiding the terrible illness caused by influenza. As an adult, if you become infected by the influenza virus, you may be more ill than you've been in your adult life. Symptoms like fever, body aches, shaking chills and an intractable cough may put you out of commission for 10-14 days.

Across the U.S. every year, thousands and thousands of people come down with influenza. While most recover without consequence, there are always some fatalities and there is no way of predicting the severity of the illness in any one individual, or the severity of the most prevalent strains of flu virus in any given year. The 1918 worldwide flu pandemic is the worst health disaster of all time, killing up to 50 million people — almost 3 percent of the world's population.

The CDC and World Health Organization recommend that everyone who is at least 6 months of age get vaccinated seasonally. It is especially important for people who have other medical conditions such as heart disease, diabetes, asthma and chronic lung disease, and for pregnant women, senior citizens and health care providers or caregivers.

Almost all doctor's offices, pharmacies and clinics maintain a supply of the vaccine that is widely available this year. Vaccinations should be administered in early autumn, as flu season usually starts as early as October, and it may take up to two weeks for the vaccine to become effective. The vaccine protects against the most common strains of influenza as predicted by the WHO, and all injectable flu vaccines are produced from dead viral particles that do not cause infection or illness. Live attenuated FluMist administered by nasal inhalation may cause a temporary and mild fever or malaise, but is a much less common form of the vaccine.



MONKEY BUSINESS

▶ Afraid to get yours? A new option, Fluzone Intradermal, uses a much smaller needle and is injected into the skin, not the muscle. Ask your doctor for more information.

The best treatment for any viral illnesses like the flu is to not get sick in the first place. Get a flu shot, wash your hands frequently, use hand sanitizer when applicable and wipe down shared keyboards, telephones and office equipment with antibacterial wipes. Cough into your elbow when you cough (so you don't transmit germs on your hands), and keep your fingers away from your eyes, nose and mouth. If you do become ill, please stay home from work or school so you don't infect everyone around you!

Pandemics: The link between health and habit

New book looks at some of the world's worst health outbreaks What we can learn from their patterns

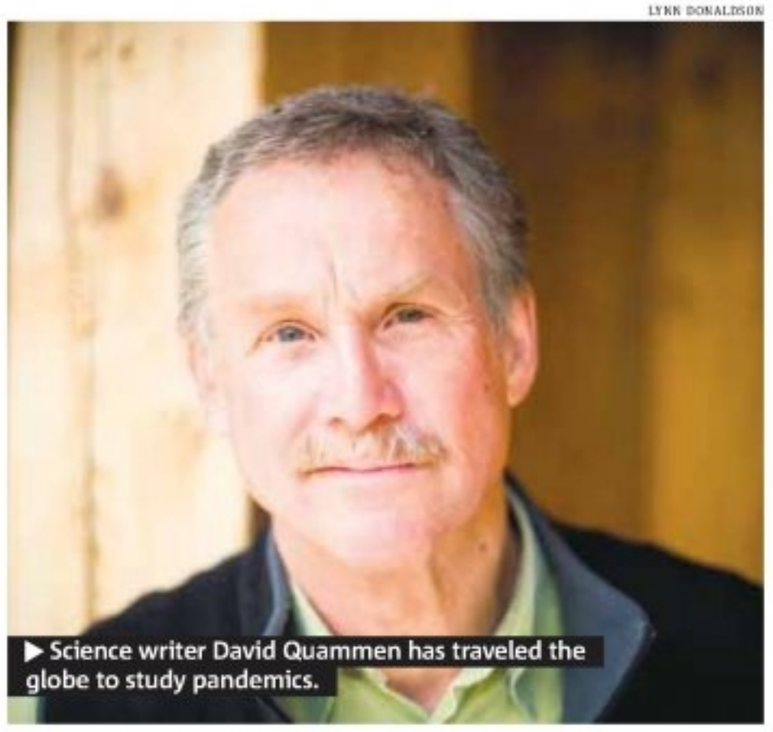
LYNK DONALDSON



Science writer David Quammen has traveled the globe to study pandemics.

In recent weeks, headlines have been filled with scary diseases like the hanta outbreak in the national parks out West and West Nile virus closer to home. These — as well as the nightmarish diseases Ebola, SARS and AIDS — are examples of what scientists call "spillover."

In a spillover, a virus or other disease-causing pathogen moves from an animal species (everything from chimps to chipmunks) to human beings. Though the virus may not cause any particular problem in this animal "reservoir host," when it reaches human beings it might cause an outbreak of a highly contagious disease with horror-movie-high death rates.

Science writer David Quammen has traveled around the world to learn about these diseases. He met with researchers in the lab and in the field, went chimp-hunting and bat-catching, and talked to survivors and other witnesses to outbreaks. He also traces their history — AIDS, for instance, spilled over from chimps to humans back around 1908.

Quammen describes his adventures in a highly readable book, "Spillover: Animal Infections and the Next Human Pandemic." This is the first book written for the general reader that draws the connections between medicine and ecology. "Human health, the disruption of wild ecosystems, the infection status of bats and rodents and monkeys and the ecology and evolution of viruses are all inextricably connected," he says.

On the rise

These diseases are becoming more more frequent and more fatal for three reasons:

1. The human population has reached 7 billion and is headed toward 9 billion, with many living in cities. Disease travels fast in crowded conditions.
2. Humans are destroying natural habitats as we clear land to live and grow food on. This puts us in closer contact with the animal reservoirs carrying disease.
3. Modern transportation moves viruses around the globe within days or hours.

GOP's not some damsel in distress

RE: "ONE MAN'S SUCCESS IS ANOTHER'S FAILURE" (METRO, OCT. 16) Letter writer Joseph Connell says that "Romney supporters should take a cold, objective look at their hero," and then nonobjectively bashes everything Romney has done, including the successful 2002 Winter Olympics turnaround that almost everyone agrees was good for America. Here is where Connell makes his fatal mistake, which dismisses his opinion as severe partisan hyperbole: Romney supporters do not think of him as a "hero," that is your word. Romney is thought of as a better candidate for president; supporters do not faint at Romney rallies like so many supporters of President Obama in 2008 and not so many in 2012 (but still way more than Romney). We did not need a Democratic Party-proclaimed hero like Obama in 2008; we needed a leader and instead got a community organizer who looks at the private sector as if they are all Gordon Gecko disciples. So after bashing Romney, Connell regurgitates the Democratic National Committee's class warfare handbook and uses words like "corporate" and "profit" with the negative tone as an average American using the words al Qaeda and terrorism. Advice to Mr. Connell: Do not imply people aren't being objective simply because you do not agree with them.

KEVIN METZ, VIA E-MAIL

Mr. Connell should get his facts straight about Romney. First, private equity companies like Bain Capital do not "bankrupt profitable companies." They invest in many startup companies or buy companies that are failing and attempt to turn them around. Before Romney was asked to take over the 2002 Winter Olympics, it had a huge budget deficit and was at risk of being moved to another location. After Romney became governor, Massachusetts went from 50th in job creation to 28th in his final year as governor.

SAM KHOURY, VIA E-MAIL

No magic gas wand in the Oval Office

RE: "FEELING A LITTLE WORN OUT? MAYBE IT'S TIME TO PRIORITIZE" (METRO, OCT. 16) Letter writer Tony Markie should do a little research and self-education. Presidents do not control gas prices. If they did, gas would be a nickel a gallon come election time.

KATE LERNER, VIA E-MAIL

Yep, people are just crying in the streets

RE: "SMIRKIN' JOE BETTER LAUGH WHILE HE CAN" (METRO, OCT. 16) How the whining right has the audacity to bawl crocodile tears over the perceived disrespect their golden boy intellectual leader suffered at the hands of a laughing Joe Biden during the debate is, well, laughable at least. Here is a crowd of mewling crybabies who have been perhaps the most disrespectful of a sitting president surely in recent memory. They have accused the president of being a) a traitor, b) a terrorist, c) a Socialist and d) a Muslim. What they are really protesting is that Biden didn't let vacuous statements made by the No. 2 gasbag on the Republican ticket stand.

Horoscope

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. It doesn't help to worry about how your colleagues are going to handle a specific situation — you need to find out. Ask them about their past experience with similar situations.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. An arrangement that could be of benefit to you financially should not be treated with indifference. There's a good chance that the rewards within your reach could slip away.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. If you get careless about researching the experience of an individual who is scheduled to do a job for you, you could end up getting a rookie.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Usually you're pretty smart about when to keep things secret, but you might discuss something you shouldn't with those who are deliberately probing you for information.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Because your resistance to splurging tends to be rather low at present, it might be best to steer clear of stores that offer all kinds of unique items. Once inside, you might go wild.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. When something is really important, you can be a tenacious person who sticks to the course until your objective is achieved. But today these enviable qualities might be missing.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. It behooves you not to act on impulse when it comes to your financial or business affairs. Be sure that what sounds good upon first hearing is able to stand the test of time.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. You've heard the old bromide "Haste makes waste." That could apply to you if you try to take shortcuts in your work.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. There's a good chance that a purveyor of bad advice could pressure you into making an unwise decision. Keep your own counsel as much as possible.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Try to be tolerant of somebody who doesn't seem to grasp ideas or concepts as quickly as most people. In reality, it might be due to the way you convey the information to him or her.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. It would be best not to borrow any special equipment that you've never used before. You could get yourself in a heap of trouble real fast by destroying both your project and the tool.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. If you are ill-equipped and unfamiliar about a big-ticket item that you want to buy, take more time to learn all you can about it. Don't rush in where bill collectors are apt to tread.

THE NEXT GENERATION

With Pats reeling and the Sox down in the dumps, there is still reason for optimism All four local franchises reloading for another decade of dominance Boston's sports future

Boston sports superstars like Tom Brady, David Ortiz, Paul Pierce and Zdeno Chara are all nearing the end of their careers, but with that comes another generation of superstars in each of the four major Boston sports. Here is a look at the next wave of greatness to hit the town. RYAN HANNABLE

In the news

We want pucks

NHL commish Gary Bettman suddenly seems determined to get the 2012-13 NHL season underway.

The NHL made a surprise offer to the NHLPA yesterday, offering a 50-50 split in hockey revenue.

If the players were to accept within the next nine days, a full 82-game season would likely begin starting on Nov. 2.

RED SOX 3B WILL MIDDLEBROOKS

GETTY IMAGES

The 24-year-old third baseman shined in his first season as a member of the Red Sox.

The Texas native played so well during his time in the lineup, the Red Sox couldn't keep him out of it even when Kevin Youkils returned. It led to a trade sending Youkilis to the White Sox and leaving Middlebrooks as the everyday third baseman.

BRUINS C TYLER SEGUIN

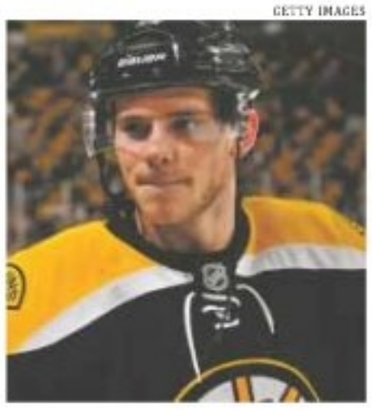
GETTY IMAGES



Tyler Seguin is already a fan favorite following the Bruins 2011 Stanley Cup title in Seguin's rookie season at just 19 years of age.

The rookie was a healthy scratch in the first two rounds of the playoffs that year, but after Patrice Bergeron sustained a mild concussion he was inserted into the lineup. Seguin scored a goal and added an assist in his first game, and followed it up with two goals and two assists in his second, becoming an instant sensation.

PATRIOTS DE CHANDLER JONES

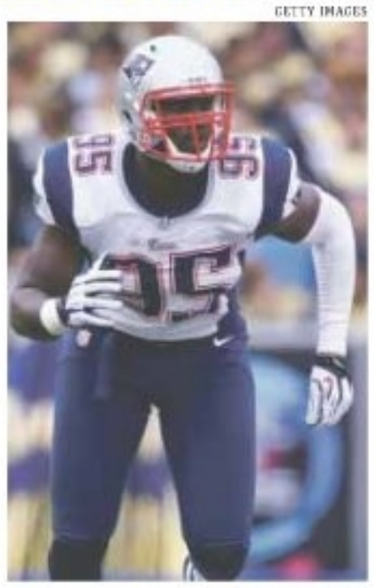
GETTY IMAGES



The 6-foot-5, 260-pound defensive end out of Syracuse forwent his senior year to enter the draft.

Despite only playing seven games due to injury last year in upstate New York, he still tallied 39 tackles and 4.5 sacks for the Orange. Jones has continued his impressive play in the NFL, fitting right in with the Patriots as a starting defensive end.

In his first six games as a professional, Jones has posted 27 tackles, five sacks and three forced fumbles.

BRUINS D DOUGIE HAMILTON

The casual Bruins fan may not even know who Dougie Hamilton is, but he is in-line to be the next great defenseman not only for the Bruins, but in the entire NHL.

The 6-foot-5, 19-year-old was the ninth overall pick in the 2011 draft by the Bruins.

Hamilton is currently still with his junior team, the Niagara IceDogs, but will be allowed to return to the Bruins organization once the NHL lockout is over. From all reports surrounding the team, Hamilton would start the season with the big-club in Boston.

PATRIOTS RB STEVAN RIDLEY

With Tom Brady not having many years left, the Patriots offense could begin to shift to more of a run-based offense and second-year running back Steven Ridley could certainly make that transition happen.

After playing sparingly behind Benjarvus Green-Ellis in his rookie season, Ridley has assumed the No.1 role this year. The 23-year-old has already had three 100-yard rushing games in 2012.

CELTICS F JARED SULLINGER

GETTY IMAGES

Although Jared Sullinger hasn't played a regular season game as a member of the Celtics, he is already expected to do big things in green.

The power forward out of Ohio State was the team's first pick in the 2012 draft at No. 21 overall.

Sullinger came out of college two years early, and could have been a top-10 pick, but injury concerns dropped him to the late first round. At Ohio State he was the 2011 Big Ten Rookie of the Year where he averaged 17.2 points, 10.2 rebounds, and 1.2 assists in 31.7 minutes per game.

Bringing the city together

With a new residential tower, Forest City Boston hopes to build a structure that will give residents the best of the Financial District, Chinatown and the Leather District

Construction has begun on a 26-story residential tower on the border of Chinatown and the Leather District, eventually adding 240 additional rental units to the blossoming Boston residential market.

The project, at 120 Kingston Street, is located on the Rose Kennedy Greenway and will also include a restaurant with outdoor seating, according to Frank Wuest, president of Forest City Boston, which is developing the project along with Hudson Group North America.

The current site is an abandoned lot, and Wuest says that the development will bring pedestrian traffic and vibrant activity to the area.

"It will bring together three adjacent neighborhoods: the Financial District, Chinatown and the Leather District," says Wuest. "We hope it will bring a lot of life to the street."

The rental units will include 18 studios, 175 one-bedroom units, 43 two-bedroom units and four three-bedroom units. The building will also include garage parking and boutique-hotel amenities, Wuest says.

As part of the deal, the developers deeded four parcels of land to the Chinese Economic Development Council for the construction of 48 affordable housing units at Oxford Ping On in Chinatown.

The tower, which will be constructed of granite, concrete and convex radius glass, is expected to be complete in two years.

3 DECOR LINES TO WATCH

1 Pretty plates: We're loving Mateus, a fantastical and colorful ceramics company from Sweden that hit Bloomingdale's shelves in September and is now being distributed to boutiques across the country. "Twenty years ago there wasn't any color on the table," explains designer and CEO Teresa Lundahl about the company's start. "I'm from Portugal and I had married a Swedish man and didn't have a job." So the former model decided to combine fashion colors she'd seen on Paris and New York runways with the traditional ceramics from her homeland for a whimsical tabletop collection. Now, her one-of-a-kind pieces, which are handcrafted in Portugal, are sold worldwide. They're perfect as wedding or housewarming gifts, or just to liven up your boring leftovers.

2 Zara invades your home: Zara is our beloved go-to for fashion-forward pieces perfect for nights out, job interviews, and just about anytime you want your clothes to lie about your paycheck — and now the brand has expanded its awesome repertoire. Last week marked the debut of www.zarahome.com, which features home decor that'll make your apartment just as chic as your wardrobe.

3 Dansk Kobenstyle returns: Kobenstyle, the iconic Scandinavian enameled cookware designed by Jens Quistgaard in 1956, is back. You've drooled over its high-gloss colors, cool sculptural handles and inventive lids that double as trivets in vintage stores, and now you can buy them brand new. Crate and Barrel is carrying the stylish line.

How to find a stellar contractor

When it's time to redo your kitchen, you likely won't be hammering in the new cabinets — that's the contractor's job. While Amy Matthews was promoting the launch of HomeAdvisor, a website that matches home owners to home improvement contractors, the licensed contractor and host of DIY Network's "Sweat Equity" and "Bathroom Renovations" offered tips on how to find the best person for your project.

Hire a legitimate contractor

"You have to know they're licensed and insured," Matthews says about finding a dependable contractor. "You want to make sure you're getting someone good from a reliable source." She suggests using tools like HomeAdvisor's Pro Finder, which does background checks on all contractors in its database.

Amy Matthews

Find someone you like

Matthews suggests meeting with two or three contractors. If they all price the project around the same range, she says pick the one you like best.

"There are so many decisions to be made. You'll be calling them, they'll be calling you, so you need to have good communication or you'll be stressed out."

Communicate your schedule

Touch base regularly with your contractor about any scheduling issues that might arise.

"If your contractor can't start because a product didn't arrive, they're going to take that other job," Matthews says.

Put it in writing

Before starting, it's important to have a written agreement with a contractor for how long the project will take, Matthews advises. "You should never give more than 30 percent up front," she says. "Thirty percent should be given midway through and the remaining percent upon completion."

Know what you want

When planning a renovation, know exactly what design you want before hiring a contractor.

"The best thing you can do for yourself is research," Matthews says. "If you start your project and you're still designing in your mind, it's going to cost you a lot more."

MINIMIZING STRESS IN BUYING A NEW HOME

By Attorney George Warshaw

The real estate market has heated up. While prices are not what they once were, prices are moving upwards with many properties selling over the asking price.

With pent up buyer demand comes stress, especially if you are selling your home and buying a new one.

Avoid the two most common mistakes that buyers make.

First, if you are selling and buying a new home don't try to do both on the same day. Sell on one day and buy the next. There is too much that can go wrong to risk it all on the same day.

Second, don't choose the busiest day of the week to close on your purchase.

What would happen if the deed doesn't get recorded that day? You might not be able to move into your new home for several days. If the sellers were counting on the money to buy a new place to live on the same day, what will they do?

All this can be avoided: never choose a Friday, the last day of any month or the day before a holiday for your closing. These are the busiest real estate days. Why take a chance?

Everything happens very quickly in real estate. Take your time – and a deep breath. © 2012 George Warshaw.
